The second part of the evening involved a simple course around the racecourse for three controls, then an optional more technical section through Knavesmire Wood. There were seven controls in the wood, and participants visited them in different ways. This section was planned to provide a relatively high technical orienteering experience. The last part of the course was planned to be easier than Knavesmire Wood, but with some technical challenge.

In the results below, the time taken in Knavesmire Wood is given alongside the total course time.
